

Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 04 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Feeling chilly under clear skies for tonight.

This Evening and Tonight:

Remaining dry through the evening and overnight, with some early clouds gradually clearing and lengthy clear spells to follow for most places. Feeling chilly overnight and perhaps fog patches to develop in prone areas. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Saturday:

Another dry morning with plenty of sunshine. Cloud builds through the afternoon ahead of a band of showers arriving overnight. A warm day, but feeling chilly in places overnight. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:

Largely cloudy on Sunday with spots of rain, although sunny intervals especially later. A mixture of sunny spells and scattered showers on Monday and Tuesday. Staying on the warm side.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.